The place is finely located in a very large tract of woods, and has an abundance of good spring water. TELEPHONE SALE.

A NEW COMPANY TAKES THE WIRES.

Sale of All the Telephone Interests to John W Thompson's New Company-They Take Possession To-Day-How It Was Brought About.

"I hear some very important transactions in telephone matters have been going on within a day or two past," said a REPUBLICAN scribbler to a telephone stockholder last evening. "Well yes. Your cars seem to have been large mough to scoop in a correct rumor this time, THE REPUBLICAN, of course, is the first to other these little nems in, so now give it to us."

Well, you keep your ears wide open and your pencil going at lightning rate and you can bother me for a few moments. It is known that for some time past rumors have been in circulation that a gigantic war in the telephone business was immi-nent, not between subscribers and the telephone company this time, but between the National Cap-ital Telephone Company and what is known as the Maynerd interest. While these facts have been well known to those posted in telephone matters, it has pretty generally been kept from the public. Such an outbreak being among the probabilities, a wrangle which would have carried one or perhaps both interests to the wall would have been the result. Foreseeing this danger, the stockholders of the Telephone Company decided that a consolidation of all interests must be obtained if possible, and in furtherance of this idea Mr. H. D. Cooke negotiated with Mr. Maynard for the sale of his interests, including all his private line, club-line, speaking-tube line rights, and all the rights to territory included in the fifth light-house distriet, extending from Baltimore to the coast of Florida. Mr. Cooke succeeded in purchasing this interest of Mr. Maynard, and for some weeks past has controlled this extensive business."

R.—"That was quite an extensive interest."

Stockholder—"Yes; indeed, much larger than Stockholder—'Yes; Indeed, much larger than some of the stockholders themselves even had any idea of, and the number of telephones in use under it was very large, with a possibility of greatly increasing the business. It was further determined by all the stockholders that the present form or organization of the company was not as satisfactory as it might be. The company has been a sort of white stock or partnership when harders. a sort of joint stock co-partnership, whose business wasmanaged by three trustees, and it was decided to change it into a regular joint stock corporation. As there was a restriction in the District laws which prevented an organization here, the com-pany decided to organize under the laws of West Virginia, and a charter was accordingly applied for and obtained. This company has been fully organized under the same name as the old com-pany, the following being the seven directors chosen to manage its business. H. S. Curmins. chosen to manage its business: H. S. Cummings John W. Thompson, Frank B. Conger, H. D. Cooke, J. B. Edmonds, Gardner G. Hubbard, and William H. Barnard. This board elected the following officers: President, H. S. Cummings: vice-president, John W. Thompson; secretary, William H. Ba; nard; treasurer, H. D. Cooke. The organization of the teasurer, H. D. Cooke. The organization of the company having been completed on vesterday, Mr. Cooke sold all his rights, or the Maynard interest, to the new company, and Messrs, Edmonds, Barnard, and Conger, trustees of the old company, earrying out the instructions of the stockholders, also sold and transferred to the new company all the rights and interests which they controlled and represented. The new board of directors take charge of the business to-morrow, and, as they now control all the telephone rights in the District, the prespect of a war is done away with, and there will no doubt be clear salling for them in the fu-ture. I understand it is the intention of the new board to vigorously presecute the construction work now in hand and for which they have orders and to use every means to build up and improve the service. It is expected in a short time that all the battery bells at present in use, and which have justly caused a great deal of dissatistaction among subscribers, will be replaced by the im-proved magneto bell, and only one or two subscribers placed on a line, so that the service can

JACKSON'S DUEL.

A Graphic Description of His Contest with Dick Insou-A Perfect Alm-How Jackson Suffered with the Wound-The Part

Mention was made in The Republican Mention was made in The Republican a few days ago of the contest between Jackson and Benton, in which the former was wounded. The following is a graphic description of the duel between Dickinson and "Old Hickory," causing the death of the former and entailing much bodily suffering to the latter: "The duel took place on the banks of the Red River. Dickinson's second won the choice of position and Jackson's the office of giving the word. The eight paces were measured off and themen were placed. Both were perfectly collected. Strict dueling etiquette was preserved. Jackson Strict dueling eliquette was preserved. Jackson were a loose frock coat, buttoned carelessly over his chest, and concealing in some degree the extreme slenderness of his figure. Dickinson was the younger and handsomer man of the two. He was twenty-five and Jackson thirty-nine years old. The General's tall, erect figure and grave demeanor gave him a commanding air as he stood in the shade of the poplars in the bright May morn." "Are you ready." Overton inquired. "I am ready." Dickinson replied, and Jackson the lawyer had unconsciously recoiled a pace or two. "Great God!" he faltered, "have I missed him?"

Jackson took deliberate aim and pulled the trigger. The pistol neither snapped nor went off. It stopped at half-cock. Jackson drew the lock back to its place, took aim a second time, and fired Dickinson's face blanched; he reeled; his friends caught him in their arms and gently seated him on the ground against a bush. His trousers reddened. They stripped off his clothes. The blood was gushing from his side in a torrent. The ball had passed through the body below the ribs and lodged just under the skin above the opposite hip. All the doctors in Christendom could not have saved his life. General Overton went forward and looked at him. A glance was sufficient. He re-Joined Jackson, saying, "He'll want nothing more of you, General." They walked to where the horses were tethered. Overton was on one side of Jackson and the surgeon on the other. Neither spoke a word. The surgeon saw that one of Jackson's shoes was full of blood. "My God, General, you are hit!" he exclaimed, pointing to the blood.

ne opened his coat. Dickinson's aim had been perfect. He had sent the ball precisely where he supposed Jackson's heart was beating. The thinness of his body and the looseness of his coat deceived him. It was a bad-looking wound. Two ribs were broken, and the breast-bone was raked. Jackson mounted his horse and rode to the tavern. Upon approaching the house he went up to a negro woman, who was churning, and asked whether the butter had come. She said it was just coming. He asked for some buttermilk. While she was getting to for him he furtively opened his coat. She saw that his shirt was soaked with blood. While she was gazing at the sight, dipper in hand, he caught her eye, and hastily buttoned his coat. She dipped out a quart of buttermilk and gave it to him. He drauk it off at a draught, and then went into the house and had his wound dressed. He seet a friend to involve convenient dressed. He sent a friend to inquire concerning Mr. Dickinson's condition, and to offer the services of his surgeon. Dr. Catlet replied that Dickinson's case was past all surgery. General Jackson then case was past all surgery. General Jackson then sent a bottle of wine to the physician for the use of his patient. Dickinson bled to death. The flow of blood could not be stopped. He suffered extreme agony, and uttered distressing cries all day long. At nine o'clock that night he saked why they had put out the lights. The end was at hand. Five minutes afterward he died, carsing with his dast breath the hall that had extreme his bady. He last breath the ball that had entered his body. His wife had been summoned. On the way to Harri-son's Mills she met a procession of silent horse-wound that, as Dickinson considered himself the best shot in the world and was certain of killing him at the first fire, he did not want him to have the gratification of knowing that he had touched him. "I should have hit him," he said, "If he had shot me through the brain."

Jackson was taken to the Hermitage. His wound proved to be even more severe than was at first anticipated. It was a mouth before he could leave the house. The wound healed falsely. Some of the viscera were displaced and so remained During the exciting session in 1825, when John Quincy Adams was elected President over Jackson and Crawford by the action of Henry Clay, the wound broke out afresh. Jackson was ele late one night with a member of Congress in Wash-ington in deep converse over the situation. It is said that the member promised Jackson Clay's support if he would agreec to make Clay Secretary of State. This would have elected the General, as three States were voting for Clay, three for Craw ford, seven for Adams, and eleven for Jackson Long did the Congressman plead with the old man. It was useless. Jackson would not give an inch. At midnight the member took his leave. The hall lamp of the hotel had been extinguished, and the General went stumbling up stairs in the dark. Upon reaching the top he supposed that he had yet to ascend a stair, and made an awkward step forward. The viscera which had been displaced by Dickinson's ball, and had falsely healed, were again severed from the breastbone, and the inter-nal wound was thus reopened. The General stag-gered to his room. Over a week elapsed before he was able to leave his bed. He had several attacks of bleeding at the lungs, caused by the wound. Many times was he brought by them to the verge of the grave. The affection was probably aggravated by his mode of treating it. When threatage it, take his pen-knife from his pocket, call his servant to hold a bowl, and bleed himself freely.
Often during his Presidency he performed this operation in the night without any assistance. Thrice while President his friends despaired of his life and during the greater part of his term he was de-bilitated to a degree that would have prevented most men from transacting business. During the first six years after his retirement from the Presi-dency his health was not much worse than it had usually been in Washington. Every attack of bleeding at the lungs, however, left him a little weaker than he had ever been before, and his re-covery was slower and less complete. During the last two years of his life he could never be said to have rallied from these attacks. He grew very weak, and had slight relief from pain. A cough tormented him day and night. He had all the symptoms of consumption. Six months before death dropsical symptoms were developed. They increased, and he finally died on June 8, 1845,

The Clan-na-Gael picnic on Thursday next promises to be a great success. The games are exciting much interest among athletes, especially the tug-of-war and the probable match between East and West Washington. The corner-stone of the new church edifice to be erected by the Congregation of the Tabernacle on Ninth street, between Virginia avenue and B street southwest, will be laid with appropriate ceremonics on Monday next. Henry Petersen, who has recovered entirely from the amputation of his right leg, will give a fine puddle duck dinner to his host of friends at his famous restaurant this afternoon. Raw tacks and fried watermelon are to be served In the Equity Court yesterday Justice

Hagner delivered an opinion in the case of the Young Men's Christian Association against the Joint Stock Company, in which he held that the plain-tiff was entitled to a statement of account, as asked in their original bill. It is stated that the Potomac Steamboat

Company intend to make Quantice a popular summer resort. A large pavilion is in course of erection, together with bath-houses and other buildings necessary for the comfort and pleasure of visitors. These buildings are located adjacent to the depot of the Bichmond, Fredericksburg and Potomac Bailroad Company. A suit was filed against the District of Columbia yesterday to restrain the enforcement of the payment of certain certificates for special improvemen; on the ground that the improve-ments had not been completed. The amount in volved is about $1,700, but the case is intended as a test one, there being several other pieces of prop-erty in the same candition. Rev. H. H. Garnett, Minister to Liberia, arrived in the city yesterday at four p. m., was met at the depot by Mr. M. F. Hamlin, and driven to the residence of Alexander Marshall, 1918 Fif-teenth street, where he will stay while here. Many friends called upon him during the evening, among whom was Rev. Alexander Crummell, who is an old friend of Mr. Garnett.

Marriage licenses were issued yesterday to Isaac Loomis and Mary Ellen, District of Columbia; Sidney H. Short, Denver, Col., and Columbia; Sidney H. Short, Denver, Col., and Mary F. Morrison, Columbua, Ohio; James Shea and Ann McCarroll, District of Columbia; George Ross and Mary Montgomery District of Columbia; Charles E. THE LATE RIFLE MATCH.

Umpire Decides That It Must Pe Shot for Again. The rifle match between the Alexandria Light Infantry, the National Rifles, and the Washington Light Infantry, which came off June 15 last, and resulted in a tie between the National Rifles and the Washington Light Infantry, has at last been definitely settled by a decision of the um-pire, as is shown by the following telegram re-ceived by Colonel William G. Moore last night: I have declared the Glymont match off, to be abover in next thirty days.

J. T. BECKHAM, Umpire.

Under this decision of the umpire the trophy, a massive silver goblet, ornamented with military designs, will be concessed for by the National Rifes and the Washington Light Infantry at a day to be fixed by them within the next thirty days.

Funeral of the Late John Purdy. Pfirdy took place yesterday afternoon from the residence of the family, on Four-and-a-half street, opposite the First Presbyterian Church. A steady stream of people passed in procession before the remains, which were placed in the parlors, and in the brong every walk of life was represented Deceased was a member of the Masonic order and the Oldest Inhabitants Association, and from these organizations the pall-bearers were selected. The first portion of the services was conducted by Rev Rush R. Shippen, of All Souls Church, who came on from Boston, Mass., for the purpose, after which the Masons assumed control and carried out the solemn and impressive core monies of their order. A feature of this ceremony was the chanting by the Masonic Choir. At the conclusion of the services at the house the remains were conveyed to Congressional Cemetery, where the interment was made.

A Pleasant Excursion Arranged for Au-

An adjourned meeting of the National Veteran Chib was held at their headquarters in Corcoran Building last evening, Captain J. B. Tanner, vice-president, in the chair, Comrade H. B. Bennutt secretary, Comrade Thompson, chairman of the committee on a moonlight excursion, reported having secured the steamer W. W. Corcoran for the evening of Tuesday, August 9, and also the services of the Marine Hand, and stated it was proposed to go about forty miles down the river, stopping at Glymont both ways, in order to give those wishing to dance an opportunity. The Veteran Glee Club will also enliven the company with a variety of their songs, and every effort will be used to make it a most enjoyable affair. The names of several candidates for membership were presented and laid over for consideration. The question of procuring other quarters for the clob was discussed, and it was decided to open a new and more commodious headquarters in the fall, to be fitted up in a man-

country accent, "Fere!"

Dickinson as quickly raised his pistol and fired.
Overton saw a puif of dust fly from the breast of the General's coat. Jackson raised his left arm and placed it tightly across his chest. "He is surely hit," muttered his second, "and in a bad place, too; but no, he does not fall." Jackson, erect and grim, with teeth set firm, raised his nistol. Overton pieced at Dickinson, transed pistol. Overton glanced at Dickinson. Amazed at the unwonted failure of his aim, and apparently appalled at the awful face and figure before him, Back to the mark, sir," roared Ove.ton, with his hand upon his pistol.

Dickinson recovered his composure and toed the scratch. He sverted his eyes from his antagonist.

"Yes, I believe he has pinked me a little," Jack-son replied. "Let's look at it, but say nothing about it." He opened his coat. Dickinson's aim had been
